

New Jersey's "Do Not Call" law is a good one and shouldn't be changed. Why should consumers have to be phone stalked by this solicitors? Businesses have the right not to have "solicitors" enter their premises. These days, calling someone's home is no different than knocking on their door. It's even more annoying. The only reason I can see that the law would require revision is because some government agency is bending to the will of the Corporate world instead of the Public for whom they should be bending.

Thank you for your time.